PUERTO MADRYN, ARGENTINA

With its elegant boulevards, stately buildings and sandy stretches of beachfront, Puerto Madryn, one of the fastest growing cities in Patagonia, has become a magnet for sun worshippers and eco-tourists alike, with the latter in search of marine life in and around nearby Peninsula Valdes and the Atlantic Ocean. In fact, the topography in and around Puerto Madryn—a city protected by a natural harbor and peninsula teeming with wildlife—makes it ideal for those in search of outdoor recreation. The Valdes Peninsula Nature Reserve provides an ideal spot to check out nature in action, where elephant seals, penguins, seabirds and the occasional southern right whale all come into view. Ecocentro Puerto Madryn, founded by local naturalists and scientists, is an education center located minutes from the city, set on a bluff by the water. Its mission is to observe and interpret nautical ecosystems, from algae to dolphins.
